TREE Storybook

This exercise involves designing a progression of pages in book form, using an accordion fold structure. The range of compositions throughout the book include type and photographic images that flow in a rhythmic theme. Each study should consider form progression, juxtaposition of image(s) and type (letters, words, sentences, and paragraphs), and visual connection and comparison. The progression must grow from the texture of a body of type to the inner forms of photographs. This exercise is to reveal photographic forms, not to display pictures. The visual rhythmic sequence is open for interpretation. The turning of each page and spread should offer surprises and create a consistent mood throughout the book.
